

Martin Schwartz is an architect, teacher, and writer with a special interest in daylight and architecture. Prior to joining the College of Architecture and Design at Lawrence Technological University, where he is an associate professor in the Department of Architecture, he taught architectural daylighting and architectural and urban design courses at Tulane University, the University of Plymouth (England), Mississippi State University, the University of Michigan, the University of Oregon, and the Cranbrook Academy of Art. Martin has written numerous articles on the subject of daylight and other architectural issues. His book, "Gunnar Birkerts, Metaphoric Modernist," was published in 2009 by Edition Axel Menges. Martin's blog about daylight, Architecture in the Light of Day, and other writings may be accessed at his website, martinschwartz.net.